Part of building dates to Fort Day, c.1780. Reportedly built by John McNeel who settled in the area in the late 1700's. He was in the Militia, in Capt. John Stuart's Co. of Greenbrier Volunteers, Botetourt County Regiment. He took part in the Battle of Point Pleasant on Oct. 10, 1774. The McNeel Family is very prominent in the county and the farm is still in their name. John McNeel died in 1825.

Sinking Spring:

A group of Confederate soldiers, suffering with fever, were retreating south and camped at Sinking Springs to gain strength before continuing their journey. Several of the soldiers died at this spot and are buried here (graves are unmarked today but there are sunken areas of the ground which identify their location). Several families came to the Sinking Springs location and removed bodies from the graves to return them to family cemeteries.

The Sinking Springs water is Chalyheate. The spring appears and disappears three different places.

John and James Bridger were slain on this ridge during the last raid made by Indians in what is now Pocahontas County. The Bridger boys had responded to a call for help after Henry Baker and Richard Hill had been killed. The Bridger brothers and Nathan, a colored man belonging to Lawrence Drinnon, had left the main party to take a short cut when attacked by the Indians. Nathan had stopped to fasten his moccasins and thus was out of sight of the Indians and escaped harm.

The front part of this house, plus an outside kitchen was used by Averile to feed his men when he camped overnight in Green Bank on his way to Droop Mt. He ordered the local women to cook their meals. One of the ladies, who rubbed snuff, spat in the food - hating the "feds" as they did. The present cellar was built with the stones from the old outside kitchen.
